

Week 11 Idaho Legislative Update for March 21 – March 25, 2022

The eleventh week of the Sixty-Sixth Idaho Legislature's Second Regular Session ended just before midnight on Friday as the last budget bill, the appropriation for the Commission on Libraries, passed on the record-setting fifth try. Both the House and Senate finished their work and are now in recess until Thursday, March 31st at 11:00 AM. Upon their return, they will consider any bills the Governor may veto before hopefully adjourning Sine Die for the rest of the year. With a recess on the 75th legislative day, legislators will continue to receive pay and per diem through the end of month, although most of them are returning home for the duration of the recess.

We often say in the Capitol “an hour is a day, a day is a week, a week is a month, and month is a year”. That certainty felt true this week, especially when budgets that easily passed in previous years, got attacked in acts of political grandstanding. Aside from the noise, this year was a successful and positive session with process, policy, and a heavy dose of politics mixed into what felt like much more of a normal session.

Before recess, this week saw the massive influx of long-awaited bills reach the Governor's desk. Governor Little and his staff have worked night and day to process and treat each bill. With this massive influx came another veto, this time on the appropriation for the Office of Information Technology Services. This veto sent a strong message to the legislature on cyber security and IT management and not tying the hands of agencies who work year-round to serve the state.

Committees continued meeting through the week and JFAC even met multiple times Friday, including a late-night Friday meeting to take up the failed libraries budget for a fifth time. Prior to that, JFAC met earlier in the day to redo the vetoed IT budget as well as reworking the libraries' budget for a fourth time. After motions, substitute motions, and fiery debate, the new libraries' budget, with millions of dollars in reductions, passed out of committee, and considered by the House for a fifth time. The budget finally passed, but only after a last-second resolution pertaining to content and standards for libraries, introduced by House Ways and Means Committee, quickly passed the House Floor.

Throughout the week, the House floor sessions lasted many hours, despite the Speaker and Majority Leader trying to move quickly to wrap things up. We continued to see galling parliamentary theatrics, campaign rhetoric, and uncouth tactics by some on the House Floor in addition to exhaustive debates and more budgets voted down. Meanwhile, the Senate flew through pages and pages of appropriations and other policies, including several bills that received amendments and quickly passed out of the Senate. One such bill, HB 735aaS, included a $34 million, ongoing property tax cut. The Senate worked through several long sessions each day this week, which also meant going into the evenings when the House and most everyone else had left the building.

There were also several bittersweet moments this week as committees wrapped up and longtime chairmen were honored by committee members, staff, families, and others. It is a testament to much of the great work, long hours, and dedication the committee chairmen have shown over the years. As we now move into a hurried campaign season, we will always remember fondly the statesmen who carried bills with honor, integrity, and a commitment to leave the state a better place than they found it.

We now wait for the Governor to finish treating all bills and for the Idaho Legislature to return and finish session on Thursday March 31st. While we sincerely believe they should adjourn Sine Die next week. This legislature has shown us they don't have an appetite to give away the spotlight. So only time will tell.
